USED FARM EQUIPMENTS WILL FIND READY MARKET

Evacuees who left used farm equipment or automobiles in storage last year can find a ready market for them at fair prices, according to a statement received by Acting Project Director Lewis J. Korn from Russell T. Robinson, Chief of WRA's Evacuee Property Office in San Francisco.

The serious manpower shortage in agriculture and a sharp curtailment in the manufacture of new farm machinery make it imperative that all used farm equipment be made available for this year's food production, Korn was advised.

Acceptance of Evacuees Allied To Nation's Aims

Public acceptance of evacuees in resettlement seems to be closely allied to what the nation is fighting for, states Dillon Myer, WRA Director, in the Winter issue of the Common Ground in the article, "Democracy in Relocation."

Myer reveals that as he wrote the article (presumably in early October), 7,600 evacuees were being employed harvesting farm crops outside of the centers. He argues that "the success of the large-scale experiment suggests that as the supply of manpower in the nation grows smaller and the demand grows stronger, employers of many different kinds may request that persons now living in relocation centers be permitted to leave to take jobs" (cont'd. P. 4)
